C.W. WELCH, or Cee Dub as many people know him, first tasted Dutch oven cooking on family camping trips in the 1950s. Little did he realize that watching his folks cook over a campfire would be his first step toward authoring several Dutch oven cookbooks and filming 2 television series devoted to Dutch oven and outdoor cooking. During his 29-year career in wildlife management and law enforcement, outdoor cooking was a necessity, not a recreational pastime. Cee Dub lives in Grangeville, Idaho.

I only have one question for all you hootin tootin cowboys and cowgirls. What Cookbook would John Wayne be using to do all of his cooking if he was alive today? Well you are looking at it. I bought this cookbook off of 3 year ago, and really thought that I could use a new twist of cooking, and I did, and used my Retro Ranch cookbook. It got everything you need to know what kind of foods that the cowboys cooked when they used to camp out on the ranch. Like 2 kind of chili recipes and all kind of baked bean recipes. Here are three items that I cooked from this cookbook for a meal. I made Quick-Fix chicken which is very good, Scratch Biscuits and Amy Tanner's apple crunch. Yummy. So if you want to live, cook and eat like a cowboy or cowgirl. Then you will want to try Retro Ranch. But remember, there's a cowboy in everyone.

I can't wait to try some of these recipes. The retro books are usually a lot of fun to read and this one was no exception.
