Elizabeth Pollard is a historian of the ancient world, in particular of Roman and Greek civilizations, and her research interests cross the disciplinary and methodological boundaries between history, religious studies, classics, and women's studies. Her pedagogical interests include the effectiveness of web-based technology and world history in teaching, learning, and writing about ancient history. She teaches the world history survey regularly, and serves on the executive committee of the World History Association. Clifford Rosenberg is associate professor of European history at City College and the Graduate Center, CUNY. He specializes in the history of modern France and its empire and is the author of Policing Paris: The Origins of Modern Immigration Control Between the Wars. He is currently studying the spread of tuberculosis between France and Algeria since the mid-nineteenth century. Robert Tignor (Princeton University) is Professor Emeritus and the Rosengarten Professor of Modern and Contemporary History at Princeton University and the former three-time chair of the history department. With Gyan Prakash, he introduced Princeton's first course in world history nearly twenty years ago. Professor Tignor has taught graduate and undergraduate courses in African history and world history and written extensively on the history of twentieth century Egypt, Nigeria, and Kenya. Besides his many research trips to Africa, Professor Tignor has taught at the University of Ibadan in Nigeria and the University of Nairobi in Kenya. Alan Karras (University of California, Berkeley) studies the eighteenth-century Atlantic world and global interactions more broadly concerning illegal activities like smuggling. Karras is the Associate Director of International & Area Studies at the University of California, Berkeley, and has served as chair of the College Board's test development committee for world history and as co-chair of the College Board's commission on AP history course revisions.

Perfect!

Let me preface this by saying that I've only enjoyed maybe 2 textbooks in my 3 years of college so far. Most are okay, but they're textbooks, obligatory reading, nothing more, nothing less. This textbook though, is awful. Hands down the worst textbook I've ever used. Nobody in the class liked it and the teacher (using it for the first time) resolved never to use it again. It's dense (the concise edition, so perhaps not surprising) and it is very, very dry. The worst aspect was the "themes" - the book is divided into chapters, each with a theme (such as globalization). This means that the book jumps back and forth and back again between time periods and leaves the student entirely confused. You're in 18th Century China in Chapter 2? Well oops, in Chapter 4 it's the 14th Century again. The fact that there are so many authors might seem like a plus (each can write about their specialization in detail!) but it isn't. It leaves the textbook feeling disjointed. I'm a straight A student, and got an A in the class this textbook was used for, but it made me want to poke my eyes out. I recommend exploring other options or at least making sure you've read it and understand what you're getting your class into before setting it as the course textbook.

EBOOK REVIEWPage 526 and 527 are the same page of text. I guess this is what you get for getting an ebook instead of the actual thing. Who knows if there are other pages that are repeated.

Do not rent/buy the online or kindle version. There are missing pages as well as some primary source documents that are blacked out. Some of the pages are duplicated. I needed those pages and documents for my class assignment so I'm pretty upset I paid this much for an incomplete book.
