Amber Nimocks is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where she fell in love first with shrimp and grits at Crook's Corner and then with journalism at The Daily Tar Heel. She holds a degree in religious studies. Her 15-year career in newspapers included stints at her hometown paper, The Fayetteville Observer, The Wilmington Star-News, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, and The News & Observer of Raleigh, where she was food editor until 2008. She writes a wine column, "Let It Pour," for The News & Observer and serves as associate editor of Edible Piedmont magazine. She is also a contributing producer for "The State of Things" a public radio talk show on WUNC-FM. Her work has appeared in "Our State" magazine, The Washington Post and other major newspapers. Her favorite place outside of North Carolina, is the Dingle Peninsula of Ireland. She lives with her husband Josh, her son Sam and her two dogs, Ava and Senora Wences, in downtown Raleigh.

As a family considering retiring in the Research Triangle area, this was one way we could take a look at the area until we're physically able to spend some time there. This book was very helpful in that regard.

Excellent!

I came to visit a friend who is new to the area and we relied on this book the whole time I was there. We found the food section especially informative, and the historical tidbits on the towns and sights were cool. I would definitely recommend it to newcomers.

Fine shape, good delivery, excellent service. Content quite helpful.

I bought this book for my son and daughter-in-law who recently moved to the Triangle area. They love to explore new places and this book fits the bill.

Purchased this book for our daughter and son-in-law who are moving to the Research Triangle Park area. Great resource.

I had an old version of this book that was 3 times the size and contained much more info about the various areas of these towns near where I live. This new version had so little of that useful info that I returned it for a refund instead of giving it to a friend that just moved to the area.

Great for a newcomer to the Raleigh area.
